Related to our discussion on FAANG. According to almighty Wikipedia, FAANG refers to the five prominent American technology companies: Facebook, Amazon, Apple, Netflix, and Alphabet (GOOG). The term was coined by Jim Cramer, the television host of CNBC's Mad Money in 2013, calling these companies "totally dominant in their markets." Until 2017, FANG was limited to Facebook, Amazon, Netflix, and Alphabet. Another variant of this acronym is "FANGAM," which includes Microsoft.

Here are some of my favourite quotes by the front figures behind the FAANG companies:

"The people who are crazy enough to dream they can change the world are the ones who do."

"People don't care about what you say, they care about what you create."

"Small groups of people can have a really huge fight."

"Don't be afraid to change the situation."

"If you never want to be loved, for goodness' sake don't try anything new."

I think the Netflix one is key.
